ÄNGELHOLMS FLYGMUSEUM

Ängelholms Flygmuseum was established at the initiative of the F 10 Comrade Association to preserve the memory of the fighter wing after the decommissioning in 2003.

The museum was inaugurated in a modest form June 2004, after which it has developed into a well-established workplace museum. The purpose is to show, what employees and conscripts worked with behind the Fighter Wing guard's heavily guarded gates during the "cold war". The museum is run on a voluntary basis with entrance fees as the main source of income. In 2011, the newspapers Norra Skåne and Skånska Dagbladet appointed the Flight Museum to Skåne's best museum. In 2014 the museum was awarded Ängelholms municipality's cultural price.

Ängelholms Flygmuseum has its origin in the F 10 Fighter Wing museum that was established at the initiative of captain Sven Sjöholm. During several years, he took care of older expired equipment from the Wing, including objects from the time at Bulltofta airfield in Malmö 1940-45. At some point the opportunity arose to exhibit the collection in a 60 m<sup>2</sup> barrack. This original small museum was inaugurated on January 13th 1984. However, this soon became too cramped, and the new solution was to move the museum to one of the large hangars from 1945. In this large hangar the museum now has a full exhibition of planes and other interesting items from 1945 till today.
